Sprintometer is a project management application for teams based on scrum or XP development methodology. It tracks tasks and their sub-tasks, with clearly distinguished groups that simplify the tracking of different areas of the project. You can easily generate project graphs that display all tasks and their subtasks, so that all the team members will always know what's going on. To this end, Sprintometer implements several useful features:

- You can easily manage project budget
- You can easily assign tasks to team members
- You can track who's working on what task
- Every task can be exported to Microsoft Excel, PDF, HTML, ODS and XML format
- You can easily sort and query data
- You can easily share data with friends and colleagues in different institutions
- The application stores all data either on the local computer, or in a database on external servers.
- The Sprintometer program comes with a modern look that resembles the Office 2007 style.
- The application is compatible with Windows 8, Windows 7 and 2000, XP and Vista.
- Sprintometer automatically starts all working in the background, so the user has nothing else to do.
- You can easily assign resources to Tasks and User Stories, so that the workflow runs smooth and simple.
- This software utility can compute unique statistical predictions, providing users with information about their current status and how far ahead or behind their project is.
