Object Viewer for Jigsaw was developed to provide you the ability to view and edit your jigsaw puzzles directly on your PC. This puzzle viewer supports both traditional and modern type jigsaws (regular and colourful jigsaws). With this program, you can edit the number of pieces in jigsaw puzzles, the size of the pieces and the order in which they are displayed. You can also view them in 3D and zoom in or out, while you can specify the colour of the pieces as you like. When you have a finished puzzle to view, you can print it, export it to EPS or JPG and, of course, you can save it. The jigsaw puzzle is cut from a picture which you can use to view it in 3D, when you have imported the picture from your hard drive. If you don't like the image you've imported, you can choose to change the image. When you have a finished puzzle, you can save it in a folder of your choice, print it or export it to EPS or JPG. And you can also view the puzzle in 3D when you have imported the picture from your hard drive. This is a very useful program for people who love to create jigsaw puzzles. Try to win as many points as you can, but be careful, not all asteroids will explode when they hit the ground.Q: Sessions on localhost I'm trying to set up a simple Laravel 5 app (the standard hello world example). I can login and get the page loaded fine on my localhost, and it returns the laravel login page: UserController@showLogin But when I do any action on the app I get an error: Class 'App\Http\Controllers\Controller' not found I can't see where I'm going wrong as I'm not doing anything special and in the config file my URL's are: URL::to('/') Any help would be greatly appreciated. A: For most cases, you should not use / in URL::to() To check your routes.php file, you should add Route::get('login','UserController@showLogin'); to your routes.php file. If it is not found there, you can use the command php artisan route:list in the terminal. Former New Mexico Gov. Gary Johnson, who is expected to announce his candidacy for the Libertarian Party nomination, said today in a YouTube video that he is giving himself a “100 percent chance of being elected president.” In the 15-minute video, Johnson asserts his position as an outspoken advocate for legalizing marijuana, ending the federal prohibition on the drug and establishing a system of “self-management” for the distribution and sale of it. “I think what the marketplace will do is force the issue,” he says. He offers the example of medical marijuana, a position he put into practice as New Mexico governor. Johnson also advocates a simpler approach to immigration, replacing the terms “illegal” and “undocumented” with more precise descriptions of what individuals are, such as “overstayed a visa” or “came here under false pretenses” or “failed to follow the proper channels for obtaining permission to stay in the country.” While Johnson says he doesn’t believe people who are lawbreakers should be punished, he says it is possible to send people home without sending them to prison and suggests that it is the current practice in the U.S. to do just that. “You can’t be an illegal alien in this country,” he says, adding that, if he were elected, it would be “the policy of the United States to offer a temporary work permit to people who have overstayed their visas.” “If they don’t want to remain in the United States permanently, they’re
